CHS CELEBRATES 50 YEARS OF 'THE SHOE'

CHS quarterback Jim Hare was presented the very first 'Shoe' in 1948. At right is scat-back Dick Gargiulo. The 50th anniversary 'Shoe' kicks off Saturday.

By JERRY STEWART

IT ALL began 50 years ago, and although the games were annually played on Armistice Day, there weren't many olive branches being waved on the sidelines.

For the football teams of Pacific Grove and Carmel, this was war. And thanks to a guy named Lloyd Miller, there was a bounty at stake.

Miller, a typing instructor at CHS, wanted something to represent the spirit of the two schools' heated rivalry, and after kicking around some ideas in his head, he came up with 'The Shoe.'

That was in 1948.

Today that rivalry is as intense as ever, and once again 'The Shoe' will be on the line as the two schools meet Saturday,

City hopes storm drains will stop Rio Road from turning into 'River Road'

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AFTER 10 years of waiting, the City of Carmel finally broke ground on a $318,000 storm drain project that officials hope will save Rio Road and Larsen Field from flooding during heavy rains.

"There is a substantial economic advantage to keeping Rio Road open (during heavy storms)," said Carmel Public Works Director Jim Cullem. "The flooding has a major impact on traffic."

Workers from Monterey Peninsula Engineering are busy replacing 750 feet of double 36-inch pipe under Rio Road and Larsen Field — pipe that is supposed to drain water from Flanders Canyon and the Mission Trails Nature Preserve.

The new pipes will cross several sanitary sewer mains, pass beneath a willow grove and discharge into the Carmel River with a special "flapper gate" that only lets the water flow in one direction.

During heavy rains, the existing single 36-inch pipe hasn't been able to handle the volume of water flowing out of the canyon. Floodwater has repeatedly inundated Larsen Field and the adjacent parking lot. "If it backs up enough, it floods Rio Road near the (Carmel Mission) curator's house," Cullem said.

While Carmel officials don't admit that overflow from the storm drain was partly responsible for flooding in the Mission Fields subdivision, the city agreed to a $300,000 settlement with Mission Fields homeowners earlier this year after the homeowners sued over the floods that struck in January and March, 1995.

The city first began working on designs for the storm drain project in 1986. The project — which began as a joint venture between the city and the county — was delayed for years for lack of funding. However, in May, the city received a $188,250 "hazardous mitigation" FEMA grant to cover 75 percent of the costs.

Before going forward with its plans, the city had to obtain permits from seven different agencies including the Coastal Commission, the

P.G. police applauded, criticized in raccoon campaign

By KIRSTIE WILDE

ANIMAL CONTROL officers in Pacific Grove have their hands full in the battle to take back the city from an invasion of raccoons. There is tremendous pressure on the police department from the parents of small children, who want the raccoon population thinned. And now animal activists, including the local SPCA, are roundly criticizing the city for euthanizing 40 of the mammals during the past six weeks. After decades of cooperation, the SPCA now refuses to dispose of dead raccoons for the P.G. police, according to Peggy Miars of the SPCA.

The police are torn between their mandate to protect public health and their distaste for the unpleasant job of trapping and euthanizing infected animals.

"We don't want to have to do this killing," said animal control officer Elizabeth Yeo. "No one has come to the assistance of the city in solving the raccoon overpopulation. But our citizens are afraid for their safety, and we have to respond."

The focus of the parents' anxiety is Casey Read, a one-year-old P.G. boy who was infected and permanently disabled after he ingested raccoon feces contaminated by a deadly parasite, raccoon roundworm. A pea-sized piece can contain 40,000 parasitic larva, capable of causing brain damage, blindness and death.

Parents have not been calmed by the fact that the infection is rare — fewer than a dozen cases of serious raccoon roundworm infection have been reported in the U.S., according to the pediatrician treating the child. Parents fear that the disease will become more common

Bay School savior Rosa Doner celebrated children

By ELLIOT ROBERTS

ROSA DONER, the teacher who helped save Carmel's historic Bay School from destruction and who nurtured local preschoolers there for more than 20 years, died November 8. She was 93.

"Those in the know realize that the Bay School is the center of the universe — Rosa Doner was the Bay School," Congressman Sam Farr said of Rosa. "She espoused the importance of early childhood education before the world recognized its importance. No child or parent could ever forgot Rosa . . . ."

911 dispatcher receives $20,000 settlement from the city

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL City Council approved a $20,644 settlement of Carmel Police Services Officer Terrell Williams' disability claim at its November 3 meeting.

Council members discussed the settlement in closed session before the meeting and then adopted the agreement — which was worked out between the city's legal representative, Barbara Kiley and Williams' attorney, Jeff Dittrich.

Williams, who was first informed by The Pine Cone that his settlement had been approved, said he sued the city because workers' compensation had refused to pay for treatment of his carpal tunnel syndrome.

The city referred to the injury as "involving the neck, and right and left upper extremities believed to be the result of an overuse."

Williams, who works as a 911 dispatcher for the Carmel Police during the night shift, blamed his injuries on a rickety chair and computer keyboards that were not adjustable. He said the department has since improved its office conditions.

Williams said he began losing the feeling in his fingers four years ago and also suffered from a kink in his neck. Workers' compensation initially paid for his treatment and the injury went away for six to eight months, he said.

After the injury returned, Williams said that workers' compensation repeatedly refused to cover the treatment.

"As far as I'm concerned, I didn't go in for it for the money," Williams said. "I want to avoid an operation if I can."

In spite of his injury, the 911 dispatcher said he's only lost two weeks of time on the job and he is continuing to work.

The city is also responsible for a series of environmental "mitigations" — adding up to roughly $30,000 — which were identified by the consultant who reviewed the project for its potential impacts.

One of those requirements called for an archeologist to be on the site during the digging to make sure that no historical artifacts were disturbed.

Archeological consultant Mary Doan, who was on site during the first day of digging, said she was on the lookout for any pottery or other materials that may have come from the Mission.

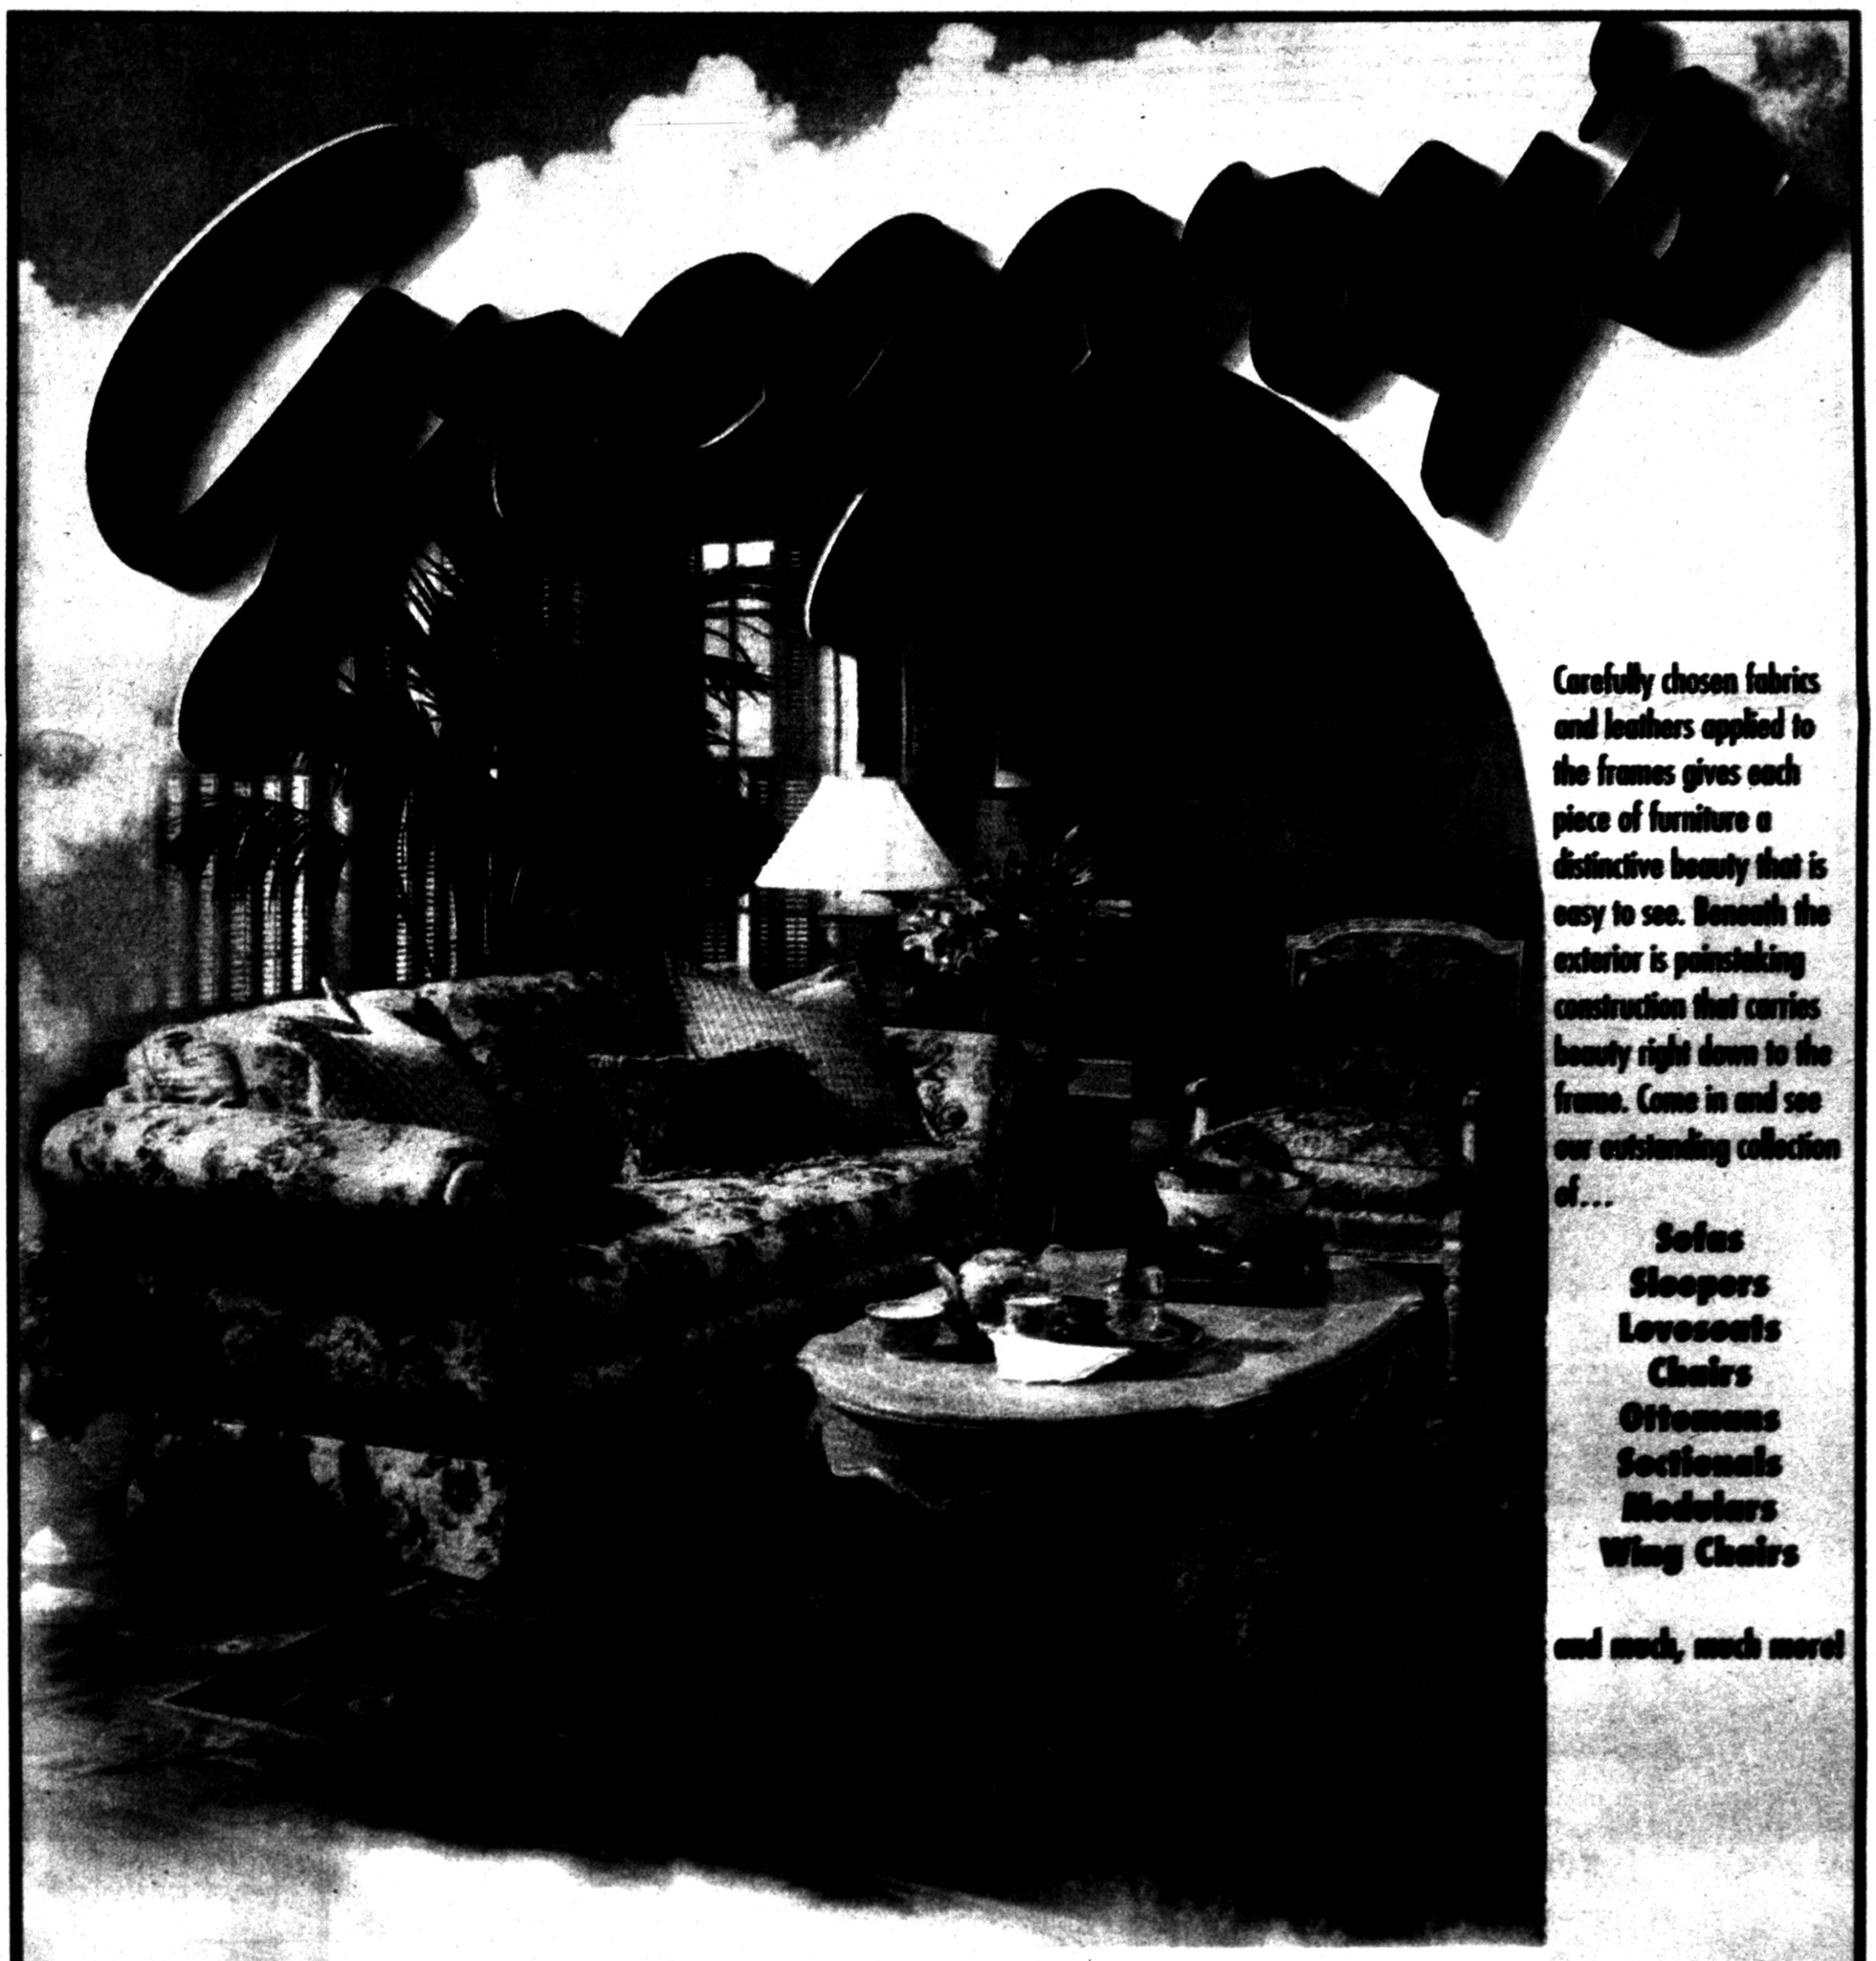

Instead, she reported that the dig was "really clean." The only find of the day was a tiny piece of English earthenware from the 1800s that wouldn't have been associated with the Mission's history.

When the digging stops and work on the gate to the Carmel River begins, the city will also have to take precautions to protect wildlife and plants in the area, specifically the red legged frog and the willow trees.

A biologist will be on site to complete a survey of the red legged frogs living in river near the flapper gate and move any of those frogs away from the work area. The city is also responsible for providing cuttings of nearby willows to be replanted.

The city hopes to wrap up the project by the end of the year.

Carmel Valley veterinarian sentenced in gun, pot case

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CARMEL VALLEY veterinarian Gerald Petkus was sentenced Nov. 10 for possession of marijuana and an illegal weapon.

Judge William Curtis put Petkus on three years probation, ordered him to perform 500 hours of community service work and fined him $100. He was also ordered not to possess any firearms, silencers or other illegal dangerous weapons during the next three years and to submit to searches of his car, house or veterinary office on demand by police officers.

Petkus was sentenced to 60 days in county jail, but that is suspended unless he violates his probation, according to Deputy District Attorney David Alkire.

Petkus, who owns Carmel Valley Veterinary Hospital, was originally charged with 13 felonies, stemming from a raid last March by sheriffs' deputies who confiscated an arsenal of weapons including machine guns, assault rifles with silencers, grenades, shotguns, rifles, handguns and more than 40,000 rounds of ammunition.

Petkus' estranged wife, Elizabeth, was the one who tipped authorities to the illegal weapons, but she refused to testify against him after they dropped their divorce case in September.

Spouses cannot be compelled to testify.

Petkus agreed to plead "no contest" to a single charge of possessing an illegal "ballistic knife," also known as a butterfly or gravity knife, according to Alkire, as well as one count of marijuana possession.

Petkus' attorney, Mel Grimes, told The Pine Cone that his client agreed to destroy all of the guns.

as the raccoon population increases.

The scientist brought in to educate Pacific Grove about raccoon diseases, Dr. William Murray of San Jose State University, got everyone's attention when he said the infestation of raccoons in Pacific Grove was the worst he's ever seen — or even heard of — in his 25-year career.

"I saw things I couldn't believe," he told The Pine Cone. "When people asked me if I would allow my children to play in some of the infested yards, I had to honestly say 'no.'"

Murray, a microbiologist, surveyed the town for several weeks. One of the most hair-raising scenes he found was in the home of an elderly couple who had called the police to eject raccoons from their attic. Murray said the accumulation of feces in the couple's home could only be described as "a mountain" which was so heavy that it had overloaded the ceiling.

"Raccoon feces and urine were literally raining down on this poor couple's bedroom," said Murray, and the waste tested positive for roundworms.

Cleaning up raccoon waste, and being in close proximity to the animals, can expose people to several diseases besides roundworm, according to Murray, including:

- salmonella
- giardia
- cryptosporidium

All four of those diseases were documented by Murray in P.G.'s raccoon population. "They also had ticks, fleas, mites and lice, which carry disease," he said. In addition, raccoons carry rabies, canine distemper, viral encephalitis, histoplasmosis, sleeping sickness, toxoplasmosis (which causes deformities in unborn babies), listeriosis, tularemia, the plague, and tuberculosis, Murray said.

"In an urban setting, these are no longer wildlife," said Murray. "They become vermin and they are a risk to public health."

But the SPCA rejects that characterization. "We are philosophically opposed to trapping and killing wildlife on public or private property," argues Miars. "They are using the child as an excuse. The roundworm has been in existence forever; why are they suddenly killing the raccoons?"

Miars decided to put out a press release criticizing the city of P.G. for using "drastic measures" to euthanize the raccoons before "all other methods of control have been tried." She also questioned the city's method of euthanasia — carbon dioxide gas. (The SPCA believes lethal injections are more humane, and uses that method to euthanize 5,000 to 8,000 unwanted cats and dogs each year.)

Elizabeth Yeo counters that it is dangerous to give raccoons an injection, and says she believes it is more humane to put them to sleep with gas.

Murray agreed, and said asphyxiation with carbon dioxide, which kills by depriving the animal of oxygen, is routinely used in the United States to kill chickens and pigs for food.

The SPCA's press release implied that someone had maliciously decapitated a raccoon. Dr. Murray explained that the animal in question had to be tested for rabies and that "the only way to test for rabies is to examine brain tissue."

The necropsy was done after the raccoon was euthanized, he said.

Contract to exclude

Both the SPCA and P.G. police strongly agree on one thing: that responsible residents must do everything they can to exclude raccoons from their yards and homes. That means removing all food sources, barricading vents and crawl spaces and removing raccoon access to roofs. The "free lunch and motel services" must be eliminated or the raccoons will never go back to the woods where they belong.

"We are requiring a signed contract with any homeowner who wants us to remove raccoons," Yeo told The Pine Cone. "They must abide by the contract or we will not trap the animals."

The list of requirements includes sixteen separate exclusion techniques and is available from the Pacific Grove Police Department.

now," said Michele Girard, a former student at Bay School, "than the pineapple juice and graham crackers we had for snacks, followed by a little nap on the floor. Life doesn't get any better than that."

Ms. Girard's mother, Maureen Girard of the MPC English Department, remembers most that Rosa "never withheld any part of herself when she was with the children. She took every child absolutely seriously as a credible human being. In Rosa's eyes, every child was a walking, talking miracle."

"Rosa Doner taught me a most valuable lesson," said Susan Share, whose two daughters attended Bay School: "how, as a young mother, to relax and enjoy my children. Rosa was a wonderful presence who made me feel that my children were doing exactly what young children should be doing."

Escaping wolves

Born Masha Shuser in 1905 in Latvia, Rosa often recounted as one of her earliest memories riding in her grandfather's sleigh through a snow-filled forest pursued by wolves. At the age of 5, with her mother and four siblings, she emigrated to the United States where they were reunited with her father. At the Ellis Island immigration center, her father changed her name to the more American-sounding Rosa.

The Shusher family settled in Newport, R.I., where Rosa grew up. She worked in her father's grocery store, delivering groceries after school by pulling them behind her wagon. Her mother felt strongly that her daughters should receive a college education, and so refused to teach them knitting and other domestic skills. Rosa attended Barnard College in New York City for one year, then hitchhiked across the country with another woman to attend U.C.L.A. Ultimately, she graduated from U.C. Berkeley.

Returning to the East coast, she became an assistant buyer for Macy's in New York City.

Each morning on her way to work she walked past the Little Red Schoolhouse in Greenwich Village. Her fascination with children convinced her to get her teaching credential through Bank Street College. Rosa maintained a strong allegiance to Bank Street throughout her life, incorporating in her own work its progressive and innovative teaching methods, its emphasis on experiential learning, and its commitment to diversity.

In 1941, after a two-year courtship, she married artist Ephraim Doner, and in 1950 they moved to Carmel with their 5-year old daughter, Natasha.

When she learned that the historic, one-room Bay School (opposite the Carmelite Monastery) was going to be bulldozed to make way for a parking lot at Monastery Beach, she began a campaign to save it. Rosa and the parents were successful in moving the Carmel Co-op Nursery from the basement of the Youth Center to the beautiful Bay School, which it remains to this day.

Rosa had held a lot of hands and wiped away a lot of tears during her 25 years at the nursery when she retired in Rosa and Ephraim's Carmel Highlands home was renowned for its gourmet dinners, lively conversation and avid games of ping-pong. Guests included most of the area's artists: writer Henry Miller, sculptors Gordon Newell and Harrydick Ross, singer Joan Baez, poets Eric Barker and Lawrence Ferlinghetti, photographers Bill Webb and Ansel Adams, and two-time Nobel Prize winner Linus Pauling. Ephraim loved to tell the story of how one evening Miller, after receiving a payment from the sale of his books in Europe, emptied his pockets of money for Rosa to buy a hearing aid.

Rosa was a lifelong social activist. During the 1950's, she circulated disarmament petitions which almost cost her her job. In the 1960's she marched for civil rights and against the war in Viet Nam; she also picketed in support of the United Farmworkers Union boycott of grapes and lettuce.

Rosa is survived by her daughter Natasha of Carmel Highlands. Her husband died in 1991.

A public Celebration of Rosa's Life will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14 at Bay School. Alumni — both parents, students and their children — are cordially invited. Pineapple juice and graham crackers will be served. There will be piñatas for younger children. There will not be any wolves.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to OXFAM AMERICA (Central America Relief Fund), P.O. Box 1745, Boston, MA 02105-9883 or Bank Street College (Minority Scholarship Fund), 610 West 112th St., New York, NY 10025.

Elliot Roberts, Monterey Peninsula College Professor Emeritus, was a Bay School parent. His poem to honor Rosa Doner appears on page 4B.

Line up behind me if your mantra is 'clip and save'

Coffee Break

By Beverly Borgman

IF YOU'RE a woman like me, chances are you have some "cents-off" coupons in your purse. They might be for cereal, salsa, salami or salad. I'd wager that altogether they're not worth much more than a dollar or two.

Me? I've got a coupon in my bag that's worth $500. I clipped it out of the November issue of the AARP magazine, "Modern Maturity." Sure, I'm MUCH too young to be in the American Association of Retired Persons, but I have a hard time ignoring a coupon that says, "$500 CASH OFF" on any new Buick LeSabre, Park Avenue, Riviera or Century.

My often faulty memory tells me the whole coupon caper started with grocery manufacturers many years ago. As a young mother who pinched her pennies 'til Lincoln's nose bled, I was often found with scissors in hand. Particularly when I learned that my local supermarket would take ANY and ALL coupons, and deduct them from my bill, regardless of whether I bought the correct products.

I didn't realize that my store was submitting the coupons to the suppliers and being reimbursed fraudulently. I just thought they were friendly. Needless to say, that little scam didn't last long.

Despite my thriftiness, I could never match accomplishments with those mothers-of-six written up in "Ladies Home Journal" or "Good Housekeeping" where the headlines boasted, "We Clip Coupons and Live on $20 a Week." (Supplemented, no doubt, by writing fiction!)

However, once the American housewife got used to carrying a pound of ragged clippings around with her, the coupon supplements in the Sunday paper became heavier than the comics. Then, about three years ago California's Lucky Stores came out with a computerized "membership card" that abolished the need for coupons at check-out. At first they continued to publish coupons in their mailed monthly flyer, I suppose for those people who just couldn't break the clipping habit.

Safeway then climbed aboard the "club card" train, printed and mailed its own flyer, and coupons disappeared from both.

"Free at last," one dazed customer was heard to exclaim.

Not so fast

Not so fast, cowboy! This year Long's Drugs began printing coupons in their weekly circular. Thrifty Drugstores (now Rite Aid — who thinks up these names?), had been doing it for some time, but my experience with Thrifty had been that if you didn't have the coupon, no big deal; they still gave you the sale price. Which led me to wonder, profoundly, "Huh?"

Last week, in one of my fits and starts at Christmas shopping, I walked into Macy's and found they had a great sale going on. It would have been even greater if I'd been smart enough to clip the Macy's COUPONS from that morning's newspaper.

And so I've made peace with the whole coupon phenomenon. Tilting at windmills is much too strenuous for someone old enough to belong to AARP. The $500 coupon from Buick continues to burn a hole in my pocket, and while I don't really NEED a new car, you never can tell.

The heat goes on

Yours truly was just one of many locals who visited Sunset Center this week to view the scale model of the Hatton Canyon Freeway provided by Cal Trans. Map-reading must be a learned skill as there seemed a fair amount of confusion.

However, one thing was clear. Whether pro or con, the 10 or so people there at the time had already made up their minds. Despite the cool rain falling outside, the temperature in the Bingham Room rose considerably as the 40-year debate raged on.

Unwary cellular phone users get handed bill for area code switch

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THOUSANDS OF local cell phone users have apparently been billed for calls that were never completed, thanks to the recent switch of local area codes from 408 to 831.

According to an employee at CellularOne, a Dallas-based phone giant that has millions of cellular phone customers in California, the recent area code switch — affecting most of Monterey County and the city of Santa Cruz — hasn't been integrated into the computers used by the cell phone company.

The result is that callers who want to use CellularOne's "easy connect" service often aren't connected at all. But they're still charged for the calls — usually 42 cents per call.

The company offers "easy connect" as a convenience for people who want to place calls with a minimum of effort — when they're driving, for example, and would like to keep their eyes on the road.

Callers who want to use "easy connect" dial 4-1-1, but they aren't connected to a traditional telephone operator. Instead, a CellularOne employee answers the call at an office in Southern California.

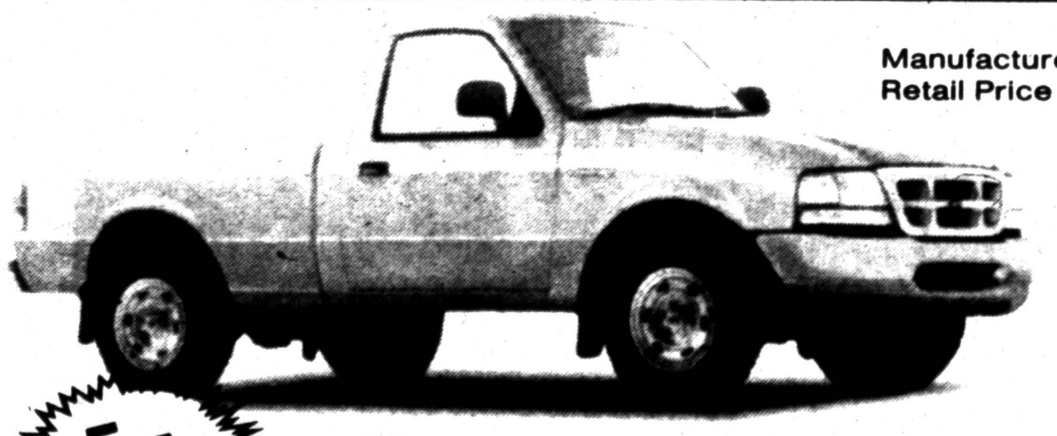

If the customer asks for a listing in the new area code 831, the CellularOne employee finds it in their computer, where it still is listed as a 408 number.

The employee then instructs the computer to connect the call. But when it does, Pac Bell intercepts the call with a recording that "it cannot be completed as dialed." At this point, as far as CellularOne is concerned the call was completed and will show up on the customer's cell phone bill.

A CellularOne supervisor, who identified herself only as Brenda, said she wasn't aware that the grace period (when both area codes were available) had expired. "We will have to get to our technical people to reprogram our computers, I guess. In the meantime anyone who is improperly connected has to call back and request a credit if they don't want to pay for the call."

CellularOne executives were not able to provide clarification of their policy about crediting misdirected calls.

Woman sues after manhole cover scare

By PAUL MILLER

A SEASIDE woman who says she was "shocked and terrified" after her car was struck by a manhole cover that flipped up as she drove over it has sued Carmel Valley Ranch for more than $19,000.

According to papers filed in Monterey Municipal Court last month, the woman, who is in her 70s, was driving her 1988 Toyota Camry along Old Ranch Road in Carmel Valley "during the hours of darkness" on October 30, 1997, after finishing work as a caregiver for an 89-year-old man who lives at Carmel Valley Ranch.

As she drove home, her right front tire passed over a manhole cover on the road, which is owned and maintained by the ranch. The other side of the manhole cover, she says, flipped up and struck the undercarriage and transmission of her car.

The "resulting bomblike and mechanical noises and damage to plaintiff's automobile violently bounced plaintiff around. . . and shocked and terrified plaintiff and caused her great emotional and physical upset and injury," the lawsuit says.

The suit doesn't claim that the woman was physically injured. But her lawyer, George Brehmer, says that because of the incident the woman wasn't able to do her job properly for two weeks. Also, she "has suffered headaches and continues to suffer headaches, has suffered disruption of sleep . . . and continues to relive and re-experience the shock and terror of the incident," the lawsuit says.

The woman is elderly and weighs less than 100 pounds, Brehmer said. "She was frightened by the whole experience," he said.

She asks for more than $3,500 for damage to her car, including a new wheel, a new tire and a replacement for her transmission, which was destroyed when the manhole cover struck it, the suit says. She also seeks $15,560 for loss of wages and "general damages."

Brehmer says that the insurance company for the ranch hired an investigator to look into the incident, and he determined that the ranch was not at fault. The manhole cover was properly seated, the investigator said. According to Breh-mer, the investigator did not offer an explanation for what had caused the damage.

"We are still investigating it ourselves, but the only explanation we can see that could have brought about the damage to her car and also the booming and crashing noises is that the manhole cover struck her car," Brehmer says.

Carmel, MST in court over sign

CARMEL IS known for its rustic streets. Wood — not metal — is the material used for many signs posts in town.

But according to a Monterey woman, last July one of those rustic posts suddenly gave way, causing her to fall, "inflicting on her physical and emotional damage, pain and suffering."

Two weeks ago, Dale Liseth filed suit in Monterey Superior Court seeking unspecific damages from the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea and Monterey-Salinas Transit.

"We referred the matter to MST, which is responsible for maintaining bus stops," City Manager Jere Kersnar said.

The incident happened at the corner of Ninth and Carmelo. The city and MST, "failed to repair, replace and maintain that certain wooden post next to the bench marked 'BUS STOP,'" the suit says, causing the post to break.

SHOE

Nov. 14 at Carmel High for a 2 p.m showdown.

In the inaugural "Shoe," CHS had quite a party, stomping the Breakers Breakers 33-0 behind the play of quarterback Jim Hare and halfback Tom Handley and starting an undefeated stretch which would extend through the '49 season and beyond.

According to Hare, who still lives in Carmel, a lot of the Padrecitos' success back in those days can be credited to the team's coaches: the legendary George Mosolf and his assistant, Don "Señor" Craig.

Mosolf made such a name for himself that the San Francisco Chronicle called him the most successful scholastic coach in the history of California.

"Mosolf had great intuition," said Hare, who will be attending the anniversary. "Back then Mosolf was a summer recreation leader at Carmel Sunset School and when we were in fifth or sixth grade he would be teaching us football fundamentals. By the time we were freshmen we knew all the plays and more about football than most seniors on other teams."

According to Hare, Mosolf wasn't thrilled by his team's 33-0 victory.

"After we got a big lead we let down, and Mosolf said we were awful," Hare said. "At halftime no one came in to talk to us, so we were a little concerned. Then, just before we were going back out on the field Mosolf stuck his head in the room and said, 'All right girls, let's go.' Man, did that fire us up."

Handley, the Padrecitos' kickoff return man, got so juiced that he ran back the opening second half kickoff for a touchdown.

"Mosolf had just returned from the Navy and World War II, and he had the gift of getting things done and implanting discipline," said Peter Berg, who played left guard on the '48 squad. "His favorite saying was 'Up the bulkhead boys.'"

The man who provided the fire and emotion was the man in the fedora hat and suit, line coach Señor Craig, whose extra shoe is now the bronzed prize awaiting the game's victor.

Known as "Señor" because of his regular status as a CHS Spanish teacher, Craig was himself no gridiron slouch, earning All-American honors at Division I St. Mary's in the Bay Area.

"That first game was hard fought because we all had to play both ways," said Berg, who now resides in the Bay Area. "I think the rivalry began because both schools were relatively the same size."

Hare, who along with Dick Gargiulo was co-captain of the Padrecitos, said that the rivalry may have started from the fact that before CHS was ever built, students from Carmel were enrolled at either Monterey or P.G. High.

CHS has a two-game winning streak (2-2 league, 3-5 overall), having defeated Robert Louis Stevenson on Nov. 7. P.G. is 1-3 in the league, 4-5 overall.

Following the action, everybody's invited to the Carmel High Alumni Association's 5th quarter barbecue in the CHS cafeteria. Tickets will be $10 at the door.

SANDY CLAWS

THREE OTTERS were cavorting in the waves close in at Carmel Beach earlier this week and hungry pelicans were awkwardly dive-bombing for breakfast further out as this semi-rowdy group romped by.

Their mom, Frances, strolled after them, delighting in their frolicky, unfettered freedom.

After a brief introduction, we rounded them up — then rounded them up — then rounded them up — and tried for a group shot.

Toby Strachwitz, 11, is the smallest of the family. He is an apricot colored toy poodle, which makes him larger than a tea cup poodle, but smaller than a miniature poodle.

He was adopted from the SPCA when he was about 2, joining the Strachwitz household, which, at the time, was run by Princess Strachwitz, the blue-eyed Australian shepherd, now 14. Although a little deaf, Princess always hears the word "walk!" — and dances up and down merrily when she hears it, knowing the beach is in the offing.

Since Teddy Strachwitz joined the family in June, the gang has benefited by her puppyish need for daily beach runs. This irrepressible 1 year-old — part Australian shepherd (possibly part beagle, or, then again, maybe part Catahoula) — was abandoned near Carmel Point six months ago, and was welcomed into the Strachwitz menage when her owner could not be located. She has one blue eye and one brown.

While we were interviewing her mom, Teddy found an abandoned tennis ball and creatively thought up all kinds of squeaky toys, which, after five months of vigorous attention, still squeak. She is irrepressibly happy with a sweet disposition, and if her mom could find "a loving and more energetic home — one with a large yard," she would possibly allow Teddy to be adopted.

As it is, all three get along splendidly. Toby, taking up the least space, gets to sleep in bed with Mom, while Princess and Teddy spread out comfortably on the carpet.

Desk clerk uninjured after battle with credit machine

By TAMARA GRIPPI

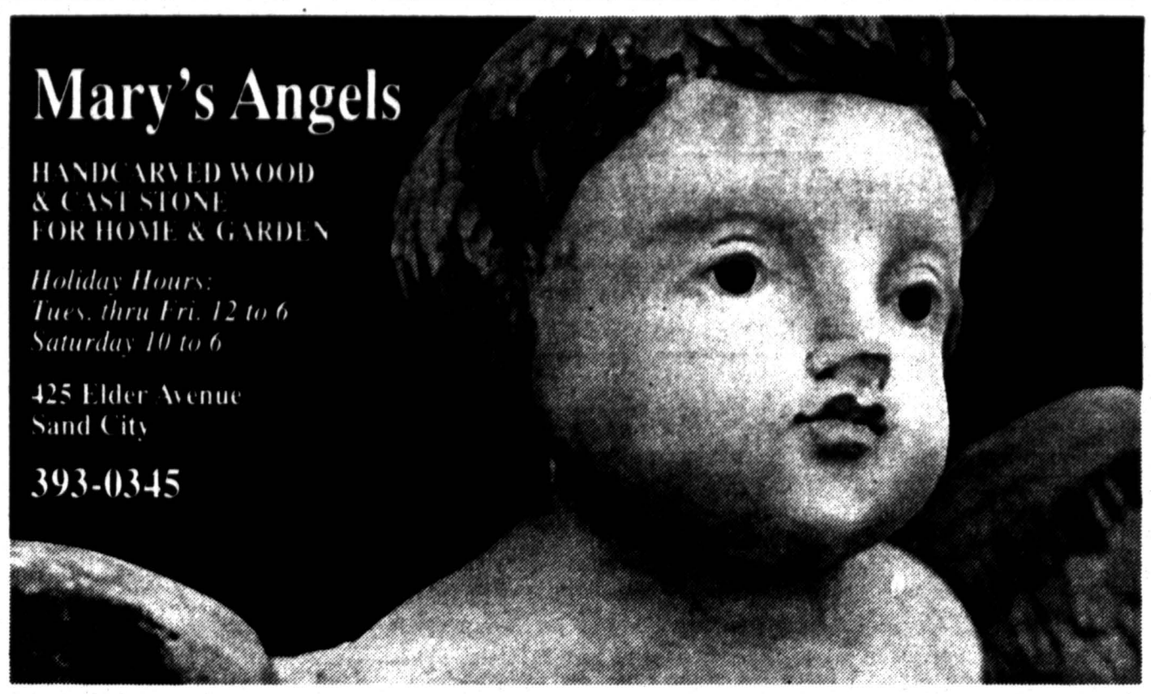

A DESK clerk at the Carmel Tradewinds found that his credit had run out Wednesday November 11, when his finger was caught in the hold of a credit card embosser machine.

After repeatedly trying to shake free, Jason Soper had to finally call the police. Carmel Police Sgt. Ken O'Donovan arrived on the scene and decided to call in the fire department.

O'Donovan brought Soper, credit card machine and all, down to the fire station. While the situation looked grim at first, fire engineers Bill Scott and Bruce Myers were able to free Soper's hands without using the Jaws of Life.

How did the young man manage to catch his finger in the machine in the first place? "Apparently he wanted to see what would happen if he stuck his hand in," said Carmel Police Lt. Bill Uretsky.

O'Donovan's police report summed up the minor mishap this way: "Physical injury — zero, ego injury — major, but he didn't leave home without it."

Hospital Logo On Board!

On October 29, 1998 the Space Shuttle Discovery launched into Earth orbit carrying five astronauts and two payload specialists. Salinas Valley Memorial Healthcare System is proud to announce that Dr. Scott Parazynski, personal physician to John Glenn, carried a hospital blended logo on the shuttle mission. The logo reflects our partnership with NASA, making SVMHS the first community hospital to have an artifact flown into space. This is symbolic of both NASA's and SVMHS' commitment to the pursuit of medical knowledge through the investigation of space. The relationship with NASA was solidified by the signing of the Space Act Agreement by SVMHS and NASA/Ames on September 9, 1998. This agreement focuses on telemedicine and the transmission of 3-D images of the human body.

We are going to be homeless!

I'm Keoke and he's Nikki. We're waiting to be adopted by a loving family. We were born & raised on an apple farm, but are now living in doggie foster care (our owners had to give us up for reasons we never really understood.) We love lots of space to run, but we both agree that our new home doesn't need to have apple trees. Eating grapes right off the vines is fun, and the beaches here are really great! But mainly, we just want to be loved. We are well-behaved and know some commands. We've never been separated, so we're a package deal.

Nikki

Keoke's son, 6 yrs. Australian Sheepdog & Lab/Retriever mix. Loves to fetch & swim and lie on his back for a tummy rub. He thinks the beach is great, and riding in a car is even better!

Keoke

The Mom, a 7 yr. old Australian Sheepdog will do anything for a doggie treat! Loves to chase Nikki when he fetches. Both would love to welcome you home every night!

To meet us, please contact Tracey Lugo at 624-7550.

Please hurry! Foster Mom has to move in a couple of weeks and can't take us with her.

Valley man lost $28,000 in suspected embezzlement

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A CARMEL Valley resident's checking account was reportedly wiped out by his weekend caregiver who made use of a signature stamp to withdraw $28,000.

The Monterey County Sheriffs Department has recommended charges of forgery, embezzlement and passing forged checks against Chad Willard. The Monterey County District Attorney's office is now reviewing those charges.

Between Sept. 15 and Oct. 28, Willard reportedly cashed eight checks by using a rubber stamp of his employer's signature, which he found in a drawer at the house, according to Monterey County Sheriff's Department Investigator John Hanson. At least three of those checks were cashed for amounts as large as $8,000. The victim called the sheriffs department after the bank alerted him that sudden, large withdrawals had depleted his checking account.

Willard turned himself in October 31 — after a warrant had been issued for his arrest, according to Hanson. He was released pending further investigation.

When the suspect was interviewed by the investigating deputy, he made some admissions about the crime, Hanson said.

The district attorney's office is reviewing the sheriff's report, which includes some of the forged checks. Deputy District Attorney Dennis LeBarbera hopes to make a decision about prosecution by early next week.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Changes in the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) have sent shock waves through police, fire and other security forces throughout the country. The changes allow cities and states to order retirement of officers and firefighters 55 and over and to reject applicants for such jobs who are over 35. In New York City, pink slips went out to veteran detectives whose longtime experience had resulted in the solving of many major crimes. For the majority of jobs in public and private spheres, ADEA forbids forced retirement based on age.

OPINION

Editorial

Bury the utility lines!

THE INDUSTRIAL age may have given way to the information age, but you sure couldn't tell it by looking at the ugly spaghetti of utility lines that mars the scenery on many of Carmel's streets.

Looking like a set for Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times," or like the backside of Hoover Dam, the plethora of power, cable TV and telephone lines that crisscross nearly every intersection in the city's residential neighborhoods is a blight that has been there too long.

A peek of white water is a pleasant sight at the end of Carmel's East-West avenues — except that in many spots the view is ruined by a mishmash of wires, transformers and assorted mysterious boxes.

Even along incomparable Scenic Road, where quite a bit of undergrounding has already been completed, utility lines are still an intrusion into some of the remarkable viewshed.

Enhancing the city's beauty is one profound reason why utilities should be put underground, but there are safety considerations that are equally important.

Last winter dozens of homeowners in Carmel were without power — some for as long as two weeks! — thanks to the many trees that fell during storms. Going without power for such a long period of time can be dangerous, especially for an elderly person who may have trouble coping without heat and lights. Falling power lines can seriously injure or kill someone who is unlucky enough to be standing beneath, and fixing them during storms is very hazardous duty for utility workers.

Undergrounded power lines can still fail, and fixing them involves digging up streets, but at least they won't be pulled down by falling trees every time the wind gets over 40 mph.

Furthermore, utility companies don't like trees near their lines, and are constantly trimming or cutting trees that get in the way, sometimes with drastic consequences. Putting the lines underground would result in a healthier urban forest.

Last month, a citizen's committee headed by Melanie Billig presented the city council with a report recommending that utilities in the entire city be undergrounded.

Their wonderful report — an example of citizen participation at its finest — makes an irrefutable case for undergrounding, and outlines several methods for paying the $15- to $25-million-dollar tab.

We believe that the committee should be thanked for its excellent work, and we would like to recommend that the city create a series of assessment districts which would spread the cost of undergrounding equitably among all the affected property owners.

Carmel will celebrate the day when the final utility line at last disappears from sight.

Menu box appeal

Dear Editor,

I am one of the owners of the Village Pub on San Carlos Street in Carmel. A few months back we were cited by the city for having an illegal menu box at the entrance to the courtyard where we are located. We put this box up on private property with the landlord's approval and it was not in a position to be a hazard to anyone. After a year of operating in the rear of this courtyard practically totally hidden from foot traffic on the sidewalk, we knew that it was needed where people passing by could see it. We had to make out an application for review by the Planning Department and we were turned down by the Planning Commission. We made an appeal to go before the council (cost for this application was $200, I might add, when it is $50 in Monterey) and we were turned down again.

There are 66 restaurants in the Village of Carmel and 12 of them, or 20 percent, are in courtyards mostly out of sight from sidewalk foot traffic . . . and the code states that restaurants are allowed one menu box and that has to be on the restaurant close to the front door. In my verbal appeal to the council I asked that they request that the planning staff review this menu-box situation in terms of courtyard or out-of-sight locations and see if they can come up with a way to help us on this problem.

I am sure that most of us would gladly give up our one menu box next to our door if we could have a menu presence on the street. A restaurant menu is the life blood of a restaurant and especially with our visiting tourists as it lets you know the hours, the type of food, and the prices and I would hope that my request will be taken serious-

Will you be a St. Bernard?

By KIRSTIE WILDE

WHEN 88-YEAR-OLD Elizabeth Geminiani fell and broke her hip in her Carmel home last July, she lay on the floor for 48 hours before anybody rescued her.

"I was screaming at the top of my lungs, 'Somebody help me. Somebody help me!'" she told The Pine Cone after her ordeal. "That was all I could do." Geminiani was finally discovered two days later by friends who stopped by to take her to church.

The Carmel St. Bernards, formed four years ago to provide lifelines to elderly people, want to make sure nothing so horrible ever happens again. They have put out a call for more volunteers, to augment the force of 73 locals who each keep tabs on a few seniors in their neighborhood.

"We have some blocks without a St. Bernard," said Lou Ungaretti, who is in charge of training new volunteers for the organization. "And we hope people will come forward to help in those areas."

Ungaretti said St. Bernards are especially needed in these blocks:

- Carpenter and Guadalupe north of Ocean
- Camino Real and Carmelo south of 11th
- Junipero Street.

Ungaretti says if you are interested in becoming a St. Bernard, you can call him at 624-5470 or show up at the next training session on Wednesday, November 18, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the council chambers at Carmel City Hall.

Expanding the program

Mayor Ken White says the St. Bernard program is expanding to assist the Carmel Police Department in emergencies.

"If we have a major storm, the police can't get around to each neighborhood to make sure people are OK and have the supplies they need," said White. So the St. Bernards are attempting to set up a network whereby the police would only have to call the volunteers who would then fan out and contact everyone else in short order.

Each St. Bernard is responsible for a two-block area, according to White. They concentrate on the elderly, but also note other concerns — like children who regularly come home to an empty house after school.

Save the deer

The population and condition of the Blacktail and Mule Deer herds of California are at an all time low. The increased development of lands needed for migration or winter and summer feeding, poaching, depredation, and other factors are resulting in decreasing numbers of deer.

The yearly budgets of the State of California Department of Fish and Game, the federal Bureau of Land Management, the Department of Forestry, and the United States Park Service have been cut to unacceptable lows due to lack of funds.

The California Deer Association, a California 501 C3 non-profit Association was founded in 1996 to help solve this problem.

The C.D.A. formed a statewide Habitat Committee made up of members, state and federal agencies. The purpose of the Habitat Committee is to fund projects that will result in the continued improvement of the deer populations.

Carmel gang may face robbery, battery charges

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE MONTEREY County Sheriffs Department has recommended charges against four juveniles and two 18-year-olds who allegedly tried to force a teenager into a van and then attempted to rob him in a separate incident just two night later.

Deputy John Pellerin has recommended charges of attempted robbery, battery and conspiracy against the teenagers.

The 17-year-old victim told Pellerin that five males and one female pushed him into a van in the Brinton's parking lot around 7 p.m. on October 25 and then kicked him in the head. He said his legs were folded under the door so his attackers couldn't drag him all the way into the van, and he managed to escape.

Two nights later, he was confronted by the same group just before 9 in the parking lot of Safeway at the Crossroads Shopping Center. He told police that the gang demanded money from him.

Instead of handing it over, he took refuge in the store and requested an escort to the parking lot.

At one time, the victim was friendly with the teenagers who have been harassing him, Pellerin said.

Although the incidents occurred within a few days of each other, there is no evidence that the gang was stalking the victim, according to Pellerin.

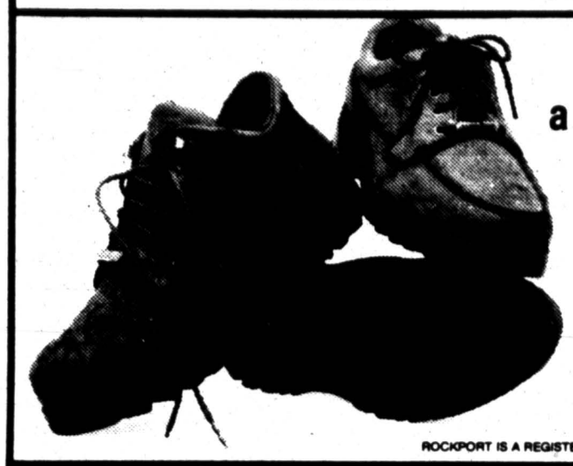

The deputy sent his recommendation for prosecution to the Monterey County District Attorney's office November 12. The case will be reviewed by the probation department before a decision will be made whether to charge the juveniles, according to Deputy District Attorney Conrad Moore.

Nance home again on the peninsula in 'Barber of Seville'

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

"I REMEMBER going to see the film, "Moonstruck" when I was still a clarinet player, before I ever became a singer," Marcus Nance told The Pine Cone this week. "It was thrilling."

What thrilled the former Pacific Grove student — now an up-and-coming young opera singer appearing currently at the Golden Bough Theater as Basilio in the Monterey Opera Association's production of "The Barber of Seville" — was the scene in the Nicholas Cage/Cher film in which the two attend "La Boheme" at Lincoln Center.

Until then, Nance, who had grown up singing in the choir of his minister father's First Baptist Church of Pacific Grove, had devoted most of his musical energy to studying and playing the clarinet — from the sixth grade through his third year as a music major at Fresno State. While still a student in Pacific Grove, he played in honors bands and orchestras and was the principal clarinetist in the Youth Orchestra of Monterey County, precursor to Youth Music Monterey.

"At Fresno State I took voice for fun in my fourth year and it took over. It was meant to be," he said.

After receiving his B.A., he began work on a master's degree in opera at the University of Texas at Austin, but later followed his inspirational voice teacher, Mignon Dunn, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera, to the University of Illinois.

By then, Nance said, he was "performing all the time. My teachers were frustrated because I was gone a lot."

Nance took basso roles in regional productions of light and comic operas, playing Zuniga, a lieutenant in Bizet's "Carmen," Pistol in Verdi's "Falstaff," and Jupiter in Offenbach's operetta, "Orpheus in the Underworld."

"I was building my resumé with these roles," he said. "And I played Collina in 'La Boheme,'" a part he had long aspired to sing dating back to his "Moonstruck" epiphany.

One role lead to another, and an offer to play in "Showboat" took him to Toronto, where he now resides.

Levin performs all-Mozart program

THE MOZART Society of California presents pianist Robert Levin in an all-Mozart program starting at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 18 in Carmel's Sunset Theater.

In addition to performing all over the world, Mr. Levin holds Harvard's first professorship in performance studies. Since graduating from that university at age 20, he has served as head of the theory department at the Curtis Institute of Music, professor of music at SUNY Purchase, while teaching at the American Conservatory at Fontainebleau.

Levin is expected to open his program with the "Andante in C major, K. 1a," written when Mozart was 6 years old. He will follow with "Sonata in F major, K. 533/494," "Prelude and Fugue in C major, K. 394/383a," "Capriccio in C major, K. 284a 4" and "Sonata in B-flat major, K. 333."

As a special treat, Mr. Levin will invite the audience to write down a few bars of music or a musical theme, from which he will pick a few and then improvise a fantasia in the style of Mozart.

Sunset Theater is at San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel-by-the-Sea. Tickets are $15 general and $5 for students. These may be purchased at the door or in advance at The Thunderbird Bookshop in The Barnyard, Carmel, Bay Books, Monterey and the Bookmark, Pacific Grove.

Bimbetta imbues Baroque 'with attitude'

FIVE WOMEN with musical pedigrees and an attitude comprise Bimbetta. They will perform Friday, Nov. 13 in Carmel's Sunset Theater, the second offering in the Carmel Bach Festival's new "Bravissima" winter series.

The members of Bimbetta blend passionate performance of Baroque songs with the theatrical aspects of MTV and season the brew with generous doses of humor. They challenge the formal recital ritual of classical music concerts, combining the 17th century music they love with contemporary theatrical devices, feminism and humor.

Tickets to the 8 p.m. performance are $12 and $10 and can be purchased either at the door or by calling 624-2046.

Classically trained musicians who met at the Early Music Institute of Indiana University's School of Music, Bimbetta performs selections ranging from the 17th century works of Henry Purcell and Domenico Gabrelli to songs by current writers such as Tori Amos. They have performed throughout the United States and Europe.

The Carmel Bach Festival's new "Bravissima" winter series will continue on Jan. 13th. Raphael Wallfisch returns for a cello recital at the Church in the Forest, Pebble Beach, accompanied by Melinda Coffey.

How to make home a source of spiritual nourishment

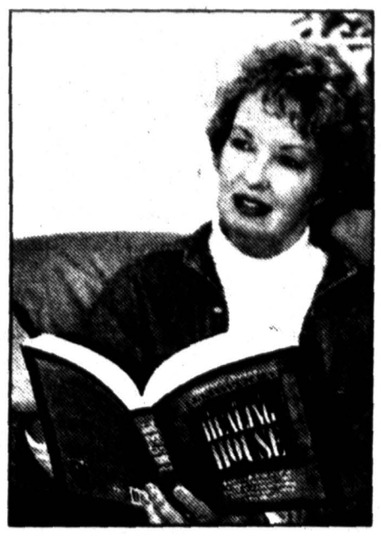

FOR MOST OF US, our homes are our castles, and no one knows this more profoundly than BARBARA BANNON HARWOOD, author of an unusual book entitled, "The Healing House — How living in the right house can help you spiritually, emotionally and physically."

Now a resident and award-winning builder in Texas, Harwood once lived in Carmel, and has good memories of our town and her friends here, recalling with great affection and admiration Marsha Gambrell Hovick who instructed her children at the Children's Experimental Theater in the '60s. Renewing Carmel friendships while engaged currently in book-signings on the peninsula, Harwood can be lead easily into discussions of how one's home can be healthy and provide spiritual nourishment, as well.

By Margot Petit Nichols

Combining hardware with holistics, Harwood's book is not only filled with technical information about building an energy efficient house that also sustains the use of natural resources (in order to preserve the rest for future generations) — but shows the way to making a home with "soul." Our homes should be homey, she told The Pine Cone this week, stressing that we should love being in our home, and that applies to every member of the family. A house, she seems to say, is not only a comfortable refuge, but a place that nourishes us and makes us happy.

Harwood

"Chemical sensitivity is well known," she said. "but the actual spiritual aspects of our homes are not often discussed.

"Human beings are connected with things in their lives, the materials around them. The reason they feel good is that the materials and colors are spiritually right for them — it's comfortable to breathe the air in such a home. Sitting in the woods we are reconnected with the earth and sky, and the trees become a conduit to our spiritual selves. Trees purify the air and oxygenate it. You should build with those concepts in mind."

The book is knowledgeable, engaging and well-written — Harwood was once a journalist with the Chicago Sun-Times — and is acknowledged by her peers in the building trade. She assists Habitat for Humanity as a member of its "Green Team," helping to make Habitat's homes energy and resource efficient.

The 308-page "trade paperback" (a little larger in size than fiction paperbacks) is currently going into its second printing with Hay House Publishers of Carlsbad, and is available in local bookstores for $12.95. If you're planning a new home or retrofit, or simply want to know more about using less toxic materials, good ventilation, passive solar additions, natural lighting, materials that are hypoallergenic, and much more technical information, this is the book. If you want to know more about creating a home that exudes peace, comfort and good health, this is also the book for you.

Saturday, Nov. 14 is your chance to meet, ask questions of and have Harwood sign her Healing House book. She will be at The Thunderbird Bookshop, The Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel, from 3 to 4 p.m. Catch her now before she goes back to Texas.

VILLAGE VERSE

SCENT OF JASMINE

Rosa Doner died this week. This was written as a birthday poem to her in 1976 by her friend and neighbor, poet Elliot Roberts. Please see her obituary in Section A.

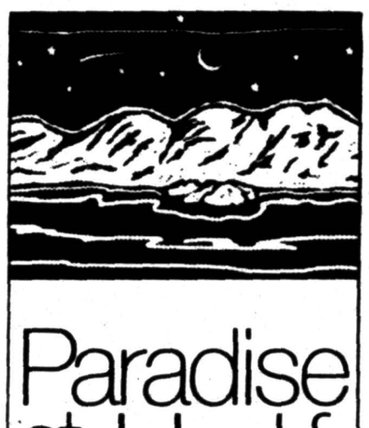

Your beauty is everywhere.

Your hair, long and gray, hangs like Spanish moss on the pines in Point Lobos; your eyes have the quickness of the hummingbird darting from purple fuchsia to white jasmine;
your voice, the sweetness of a gentle rain,
the sound of raindrops; your body, the grace of the cypress, limbs twisting and swaying, dancing, dancing in the morning wind.

No way to tell which birthday: so alive to each moment, you see with such freshness
the beauty around you; are that beauty, outside of time, whole, beyond yearly birthdays;
glow with the same spirit that animates
moss and hummingbird, rain and cypress, the same spirit that fills your garden with the scent of jasmine.

— Elliot Roberts

OPERA . . .

"'Showboat' wasn't me, but I was just getting out of grad school and it offered me an amazing amount of money," he said candidly. "I performed in it for a year, became financially set up, and then went back to doing opera."

Working as a free-lance artist, Nance's agent keeps him steadily occupied in roles that take him to opera houses and theaters in Canada, the U. S. and throughout Europe. He was nominated for the 1998 Dora Award for most outstanding male performer in opera for his role in a modern opera, "Elsewhereless."

"The Dora is the Canadian equivalent to a Tony award," he explained, "but in Canada, they include opera as a category."

Back to the Monterey Peninsula

How, then, did he come by the role of the music teacher, Basilio, in the local production of "The Barber of Seville"?

"Jackie Craghead has always been very interested in my career," Nance said. "She's a big fan of mine, and as a member of the Monterey Opera Association, had been wanting me to come out and do something in Monterey for the longest time. I love the role of Basilio, I was free, and so I sent Jackie a tape and resumé, which she gave to Sid Cato, director of "Barber" for MOA. I got the role."

Craghead — who had sung with Nance for a number of years in the Pacific Grove church choir as he was growing up — is a Carmel business woman, art gallery owner and a supporter of the arts. She attended two of the three performances last weekend of "Barber," and told The Pine Cone, "Marcus was off the chart good."

Nance's favorite role to date is the part of Malcolm in "Elsewhereless."

"It's the most demanding role, with the whole opera focuing on the bass, which is not usual. Usually tenors and sopranos get the attention," he said. "Malcolm is a young African man who wants desperately to get out of a Rwanda type country. Two ambassadors from western countries come in and he works for them. In the beginning, he can't speak English. He stumbles. As the opera progresses, time passes and he speak English fluently. At the end of the relationship, he has learned all the wrong things from the men and becomes manipulative."

The sequence of the opera goes back and forth in time, and Malcolm is seen as shy in some scenes, eloquent in others.

"This is a demanding role, but I didn't really have to develop the character. It was something I was able to pull out of myself easily — wanting to be somewhere else, dealing with oppression and prejudice — just a yearning for something you can't have. These emotions came very naturally with this role, but we need to pull these emotions out of traditional roles, as well," he said.

Scheduled to play his favorite part with the touring company of the Toronto-based Tapestry Music Theatre, Nance will sing in Amsterdam, Rome and Paris, and even now performances are being negotiated in other cities. The tour commences in October of next year.

Final performances of 'Barber'

Until then, Nance is enjoying a visit with his now-retired father in Pacific Grove. Local audiences will be able to catch one of the three final performances of "The Barber of Seville" in Carmel Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 13 to 15.

FROM RENOIR TO RENOIR

THE INSPIRED WORK OF A NEW GENERATION

"Le dejeuner des Canotiers" (original) Pierre R. Renoir

La gravure a la Pointe Seche: Drypoint Engraving...

Used since the end of the 15th century, the drypoint engraving technique consists of drypoint lines directly drawn onto a metal plate without the help of chemical products like acids and varnishes.

The tools used are made with hard steel or diamond points which leave on each side of the line a characteristic edge called "burr."

PIERRE RENOIR'S personal technique consists of the removal of these burrs, thus creating a cleaner and more definite line, and allowing the use of a wider range of grays.

Drypoint was primarily used (notably by Rembrandt) as a mixed media, to enhance and retouch an etching faded by repeated scorings.

The edition of a drypoint engraving is necessarily very limited due to the fragility and softness of the work, which deteriorates with every pass through the engraving press.

Autumn fun and fund raising at Carmel Woman's Club

I've got a million-dollar business idea. I've figured out that the biggest profit health clubs make is on initiation fees and the last five months of a person's membership. I have observed the inevitability of the following:

You, as the new member, begin with the best intentions ("I'll stick to this even if it kills me!") which start sputtering at about the fifth week. The second and third month you're simply in denial because your budget is still adjusting to the new monthly debit. The fourth month is invariably filled with absences attached to excuses which can no longer be used by the sixth month, at which point you throw in the towel, call the club — tail between your legs — and cancel your membership.

So here's the deal: how about setting up a workout space in a different area every eight months? You use the first two months to allow word-of-mouth — through associative guilt — to work its magic and increase sign-ups. Then, at the end of eight months, you close up shop . . . and, with nary any wear and tear on the equipment, you pack up and move to the next town . . .

■ Harvest luncheon garnished with fun sale

On Nov. 2, to launch the winter season, the Carmel Woman's Club held a colorful fundraising sale while also enjoying a great lunch catered by Carl Miller. Led by Audrey McCarthy, event organizers made the most of both Halloween and Thanksgiving decorations to get the guests into the spirit of the "harvest" period.

The club, continuing a tradition that dates back to the 1920s, provides a place where relative newcomers like Nancy Reiley can socialize and become comfortable in our community, while contributing to it, too. And just as the club's mission served its purpose back in the '20s, it fulfills the same need today, according to Club President Betty Neill. Or, as she pointed out, "people's lives change, and they get a fresh perspective" on how to tap into a new supportive circle.

But, speaking of fresh perspectives, Betty did crack me up recalling an incident at a board meeting a few years back. Running across what a new member didn't know was an old photo of a club meeting, this member asked, "Why are these women dressed this way? Was it a costume event?"

■ La Mirada gets its life story in print

It's unbelievable to learn that with all the rich history that belongs to Monterey Museum of Art's La Mirada house, funding for producing a basic booklet on its past was just recently found, thanks to an anonymous donor. And even then, costs would have far surpassed the $35,000 spent, had it not been for the high-quality year-long volunteer work of Virginia Stone and Gail Gonzales. All this was celebrated Nov. 6th, at a reception at La Mirada.

People and Places

By Sissi Maleki

"It's really great when you can learn so much while you're doing so much work," said Ginny Stone, as she patiently autographed copy after copy of "The Story of La Mirada." But it was definitely tough "to tell the 200-year-old story with a real sense of romance and history," Ginny added. "If we've succeeded in doing that, we'll be very happy," she concluded.

Nancy Iverson, a volunteer gardener at the house, commented on how different the booklet was from the usual run-of-the-mill museum booklet. "This is an actual historical document, filled with old photos and history," she pointed out, "not some sleek contemporary account."

caused major consternation when she innocently revealed that she had purchased her own copy of the booklet. Last I heard, the La Mirada group planned to give her a very special version of the publication. At another end, Bob Work took a walk back into memory lane, or more specifically, to when he was in his teens. That was when he attended his grandfather's (T.A. Work's) golden anniversary, which just happened to coincide with VJ Day. The elder Work, a banker, resided there in the late '30s.

■ Salvation Army gets sneak peek at Seville's barber

If you were lucky enough to be in the right Salvation Army crowd on Nov. 5th, you were privy to a preview of the Monterey Opera Association's "Barber of Seville" now playing at the Golden Bough Theatre. And thanks to Morley Brown and Ron Weitzman, opera buffs who were Salvation Army supporters had a chance to gab and munch and drink in the theater's lobby before the performance.

My eye was caught by a very unusual scarab necklace worn by Betty Martin. Turns out it was a gift from her husband bought 50 years ago on their honeymoon in Carmel. Many years later, they finally gave in to Carmel's charms and began calling it home. (Carmel may be one of the top honeymoon capitals of the world . . . but we also certainly know how to reel 'em back!)

Former board member Norm Chetlin and his wife Linda raved about the quality of work the Salvation Army has consistently been achieving.

"They never say no to anyone," Norm said of the group's staff. "They do a magnificent job and their morale is very high." I can certainly vouch for volunteer Clifford Bagwell's morale — he was handing out those glasses of wine like the Old West's medicine man peddling his elixirs from his wagon . . . .

Morley Brown catching her breath with Donna Jett at the Salvation Army's preview of 'The Barber of Seville.'

■ Good times with The Junior League

There's something about the name "New York" that simply implies energy and the crowd at the Junior League's fundraiser on Nov. 7th at Carmel Valley Ranch seemed to have tapped into it. With the theme of "New York, New York!" and outrageously tempting auction items (I dare you to tell me you'd have no interest to fly on a private plane to L.A. to meet Jay Leno!), the evening was a smash. (No small credit to the performing Carmel Rotary Blues Band, too!)

Board Member Beth Kurzava did intrigue me when she mentioned that maybe the group should be now called the "Senior League." Apparently, a few years ago they finally eliminated the old rule that you had to be under 40 to be a member. Though the original concept was based on the need to train young women to do non-profit work, Beth stated they now officially recognize that "a woman over 40 has some worth!" (Baby boomers can now relax.)

Frankly, I can't picture the energetic crowd I saw that night being put out to pasture at 40. Jeannie Rowe was discussing with Paula Robinson the progress she's made in spaying the feral cats hanging around Pebble Beach. Paula's on the SPCA board and, together with what Jeannie calls "fantastic help" from the Pebble Beach Co., there's been major progress in spaying and providing rabies shots to these homeless cats.

I caught Linda Yellich contemplating bidding on a wonderful watercolor work by Kathleen Lepori. Linda's gearing up to move from Salinas into her brand new home in Carmel — a great excuse for a shopping spree tied to a good cause! Also caught taking very close looks at the auction items were Mary and Burney Threadgill and Dr. John and Judy Kennedy. A successful evening for all concerned . . . .

it was to provide a place for middle and high school kids to hang out after school.

On a side note, Anna reportedly was the one who talked a large number of her relatives, including aunt Jennefer Santee and uncle Skip Lloyd, into making this evening a family reunion of sorts. The last time the Lloyd contingent had a reunion, it was in England, celebrating the 100th birthday of a relative in Kent!

■ 'Enchanted Evening' prevails despite rain

There's a definite satisfaction in thumbing your nose at lousy weather and having a good time anyway. Good motivation helps. Guests at "An Enchanted Evening" at Quail Lodge on Nov. 7th, organized by Carmel Valley Youth Center's board, were certainly looking forward to great entertainment by singer Stephanie Waldrip.

But there was also a real undercurrent of pride and excitement for recent events involving the Center, specifically the partnership with the new Boys & Girls Club for Carmel Valley. Many (Fran and Bob Higgins and Annie and Michael Keresey to name a few) credited the hard work of Board President Meredith Manhard for the success of the project. Anna Levy, a young mother of one, recalled her days of growing up in the Valley and explained how essential

Finely tuned Maugham play rife with acerbic humor

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

THEATER REVIEW

W. SOMERSET Maugham's cynical and somewhat jaundiced view of marriage and, particularly, a woman's role in a relationship, is always evident in his works.

In "The Circle," "Willie" Maugham's acerbic wit tempers his point of view and seasons it with humor — the safest way to propone an unpopular opinion. From his Notebook, he suggests: "A woman may be as wicked as she likes, but if she isn't pretty it won't do her much good." And: "No man in his heart is quite so cynical as a well-bred woman."

"The Circle" acquaints us with three pretty, well-bred, cynical women and, not to be prejudiced, three cultured, cynical men.

Director Nick Hovick catches all the author's less-than-subtle innuendo without subjecting the audience to unbearable ennui, which a poorly tuned interpretation of a Maugham play can create.

The play opened Nov. 7 at the Indoor Forest Theatre in Carmel to a full and appreciative house that obviously caught every nuance of the author's sometimes oblique humor.

The three-act play, set in stately British opulence, examines the convoluted love life of two generations who share family ties and awakened and reawakened romantic interests.

The eight-member cast introduces our local theatergoers to some new faces that we look forward to seeing again, and calls on the performance of some of our old and familiar stage favorites.

Particularly impressive in her role was Susan Keenan as Lady Kitty Cheney. Supported brilliantly by Peter Eberhardt as the pompous Lord Porteus, the Lady's lover of 25 years, and Thomas Burks as her sardonic ex-husband, Clive Champion-Cheney, Susan Keenan gambols through a range of hilarious character idiosyncrasies and serious reflective emotions.

The young-love triangle (as opposed to the older-love triangle) is solved with true Maugham skepticism . . . and humorous insight. These parts played out by the newcomers to our stages, feature Jason Buckley as Arnold Cheney, Ben White as Teddy Lutton, and Alaini Stamatepoulos as Arnold's young wife, Elizabeth Cheney.

Another of Maugham's suspect observations is the pervasive theme of this triangle: that, "as soon as the madness which blinded the lover disappears it leaves him with a wife to whom he is indifferent."

The Director's Notes point out: "You may see a part of yourself in one or more of these characters. If that turns out to be the case, may I offer my sincere sympathy."

Instead, I would suggest you attend a performance of "The Circle" more for pleasure than for dubious enlightenment.

Besides that: The play is fun!

Jelena's Skin Care

The nurturing treatments of Jelena Von Thurn, European skin care and massage specialist, are now offered at her clinic in downtown Carmel.

Jelena's services were previously available only through the Monterey Peninsula's top resorts. Last month she opened Jelena's Skin Care and Anti-Aging Clinic at the southeast corner of Monte Verde and Seventh.

"I was very fortunate to be exposed to the best in New York," she says of her training. She is a N.Y. state licensed massage therapist adept at several techniques: medical, sports, aromatherapy, acupressure and reflexology.

Jelena is also an expert facialist whose anti-aging treatments cleanse and detoxify and deal with skin pigmentation, wrinkles, acne, razor burns and stress. She carries her own anti-aging skin care line from Paris, which she describes as "fabulous."

Esthetic treatments are available individually or as a series, and include chemical peel (modified), vitamin C epidermal mask, enzyme, AHA, glycolics, deluxe European facial, body treatment, full waxing service and more.

Services are available by appointment only. Simply call 622-9218 or page her at 644-7271.

Kim 3 @ Teeleet Antiques

All those red English telephone booths are a tip-off: something very special lurks beyond those brick walls. Already a fixture in Carmel Valley Village, Kim 3 @ Teeleet Antiques at 25 Pilot Road has acquired a new owner and a slightly new name.

It's now called Kim 3 @ Teeleet Antiques, in honor of Kim Mascheroni, its new owner. Mascheroni owns antique shops in Los Angeles and Santa Barbara, and is hoping her Carmel Valley venture is equally successful.

You'll see the same categories of antiques that made Teeleet a destination of note: Scandinavian and European antique pine. Mascheroni will overlay this inventory with fine Asian antiques, chiefly from the Qing Dynasty, according to the manager, Joseph Worthington.

Kim 3 @ Teeleet is open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. For details, call 659-1360.

The Cottage: crowd-pleaser for visitors and locals alike

THE COTTAGE, a little Carmel charmer of a restaurant, has beguiled many a celebrity into its cozy interior. Recently, Brad Pitt and Jennifer Aniston dined in the small alcove for two to the left of the main dining room entrance. Other stars enjoy The Cottage, too, including Jessica Walters (of "Play Misty for Me"), Beach Boy Brian Wilson, James Woods and "Night Court" Richard "Bull" Moll. Aside from the celebs and visitors, The Cottage attracts a loyal following of locals.

By MORGAN

And no wonder: The Cottage serves breakfast, lunch and dinner with an extensive menu for each — and actually extends breakfast from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily. Belgian crepes can be ordered at all three meals.

The owners, all Cardinallis, purchased Katy's restaurant from Katy Curry some four years ago, renaming it The Cottage. Steve Cardinalli stepped in as chef with six years of experience from his mother Kathleen's Left Bank restaurant in Carmel Plaza, and aided by San Francisco and New York-trained chef Ron Plantz. Kathleen Cardinalli heads the wait staff after 11 years of proprietorship of The Left Bank; and Nellie Cardinalli, married to Steve, is hostess, bookkeeper, payroll clerk and administrator.

When a restaurant serves three distinct menus a day, it is incumbent upon the reviewer to breakfast, lunch and dine there for a well-rounded overview of the quality and service. We did just that, and were pleased with what we ate and observed, surprised at the remarkable selection of regular menu items and specialties prepared in the kitchen with fresh ingredients daily.

Nothing mignon about this filet!

Dinner time at The Cottage is a pleasant affair, with diners enjoying the crackling fire in the floor-to-ceiling brick fireplace with niches for pottery and memorabilia.

We ordered an artichoke (cooked with oregano) prepared to just the right tooth-resistance and served with not only tarragon mayonnaise, but drawn butter as well, and manzanilla and black olives, for $4.95.

We selected the 10 oz. filet mignon medium for dinner, and it was served exactly as we had specified. We were astonished that a 10 oz. filet looks like a small well-turned roast. The most expensive item on the dinner menu ($17.95), it comes with a choice of soup or Caesar salad, two fresh vegetables with Hollandaise sauce, and a small portion of fettuccine Alfredo. Other dinner entrées include catch of the day at market prices, sautéed prawns, $15.95; lemon chicken, $9.95; tortellini (a different filling each evening), $11.25; fettucine Alfredo, $9.25; and many more tempting items.

Affordable, choosable wines

The wine list is abbreviated: Four whites, three reds and a sparkling wine comprise the offerings, ranging from $4 to $4.75 a glass and from $13.50 to $41 a bottle. All of the wines, except the Talbot Chardonnay at $41, can be purchased by the glass. You can order a Murphy Goode Sonoma Co. fumé blanc for only $17.50 a bottle or a Bogle Merlot for $15 a bottle — a refreshing sight on a menu for these eyes accustomed to pricey, pricey wines.

Because I ordered the artichoke appetizer and the filet dinner, which I asked to be accompanied by a clam chowder — tasty and pleasantly chunky with carrots and potatoes (not Cuisinarted to baby food smoothness) — dessert was simply out of the question.

We enjoyed it vicariously, however, watching two young women at the next table demolish with delectation an order of "angel wings" and one of gingerbread with lemon sauce, $4 and $3.50 respectively.

Angel wings are a Cottage original, made by dividing a slice of Cottage-made angel food cake, spreading it open to form "wings," adding a scoop of ice cream for the head, then drenching it all with hot fudge, fresh strawberries and whipped cream. Need we tell you that The Cottage makes its own fudge, butterscotch and lemon sauces?

If you lunch at The Cottage, just reading the menu is sure to whet your appetite. Each day locals can count on specials offered year in and year out on the same days of the week, but there is an extensive luncheon menu besides these.

Breakfast from 7:30 a.m.

Steve told us that their oatmeal, made with steel-cut oats, is one of their most popular breakfast items at $3.25; as is Cottage French toast made with Italian panetone fruit bread or egg bread for $5.95. Early this week, before our beach run, we sampled a remarkable yogurt parfait served in an old-fashioned tall soda glass with fresh strawberries and raspberries, very crunchy granola, drizzled with honey, $5.95.

The bottom line is that the Cardinallis keep their prices reasonable and the quality of their food superior. The atmosphere is pleasant and inviting. Sitting in the bay window looking out on one of the prettiest streets in Carmel is a pleasure we'll return to often.

Arts benefactor nominations extended

IT WILL BE another two months before the annual Cultural Council for Monterey County holds its annual Benefactor of the Arts gala originally scheduled for Oct. 23. The event is rescheduled for Saturday, Jan. 30, 1999 and will be held at the Embassy Suites, Seaside.

David Cloutier, executive director of the council, announced that the gala was postponed "due to unavoidable conflicts with two major arts fund-raising events."

Because of the change of date, the nominations deadline for Benefactors of the Arts — leaders of the arts in Monterey County — has been put forward to December 31.

Nomination packets and information are available by calling 622-9060.

Tamarkin leads symphony concerts

A 53-YEAR first, the Monterey Symphony will be lead by a woman, conductor Kate Tamarkin, in its series scheduled Sunday through Tuesday, Nov. 15 to 17. Tamarkin will collaborate with Van Cliburn Piano Competition winner Yakov Kasman.

Concerts will take place at Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth in Carmel at 3 p.m. Sunday and 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 15-16, and at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 17 in Sherwood Hall, 940 N. Main St., Salinas.

Single tickets to the Monterey County Symphony are $35, $30, $18 and $14 (for students) for the Carmel Sunday concert; $35, $30 and $24 for the Carmel Monday concert, and $28, $20 and $15 for the Salinas Tuesday concert. At the Salinas concert, seniors (65 and older) and children (12 and younger) can purchase discounted reserved orchestra seats for $24 and $10 respectively. Also at the Salinas concert, college students (full time i.d. required) can purchase unreserved balcony seats for $10. Single ticket buyers may apply the cost of their single tickets to the price of a subscription. Call 624-8511.

"Carmel Legends"
No. 20

If you are not familiar with "The Nixon File" in the Harrison Memorial Library, we recommend it to you. The name "Nixon" has nothing to do with the former president, but refers to MRS. D. E. NIXON, a rather formidable lady of great imagination. In 1948, after having lived in Carmel for 25 years, she conceived the heroic task of assembling pictures, letters and memorabilia to record Carmel's history. Three massive cabinets in The Library now contain the results of her labor of love, and they are a gold mine of information. Another Nixon of her time, probably no more related to her than Richard M., was "Nick," a friendly character, who spent most of his time sweeping out of the post office and telling stories to people collecting their daily mail. One had to do with his dog, Duke, who chased cats. He'd round up 15 or so in an alley, and when they split up, Duke would "just stand there wondering which one to go after." Nick and Duke may have been a bit confused, but MRS. D.E. knew what she was doing!

Another jewel added to Carmel's romantic streetscape

By PAUL MILLER

WHEN THE LAST of Carmel-by-the-Sea's movie houses closed in January, 1995, some lamented the loss of "village character" that came when it was no longer possible to see a movie in town. After all, Carmel-by-the-Sea isn't exactly bursting with night life.

But a graceful new building called Fleur de Ville (the "flower of the town") has taken the theater's place. After a tour of the new building last month, Mayor White called it "a remarkable addition to downtown Carmel."

The 408-seat Carmel Village Theater at 7th and Dolores had screened first-run films for 30 years but finally shut because too much business was lost to multi-screen theaters in nearby communities.

The theater building, erected in 1966, was functional but utilitarian — "just a big box," says Carmel designer John Mandurrago who, along with contractor Corey McMills and a group of investors, bought the Carmel Village Theater soon after it closed.

"The building was in disrepair, but it was structurally very sound," McMills says.

The partners decided to strip the old theater to its structural walls, transforming it into a mixed-use building with an elegant exterior in the style of a French country cottage.

The building's underground parking garage is pretty much unchanged. But nothing else is. "There are balconies and patios on the front of the building and on all four corners, and the upper floor is stepped back from the street, which makes the whole structure look a lot smaller than it is," Mandurrago says.

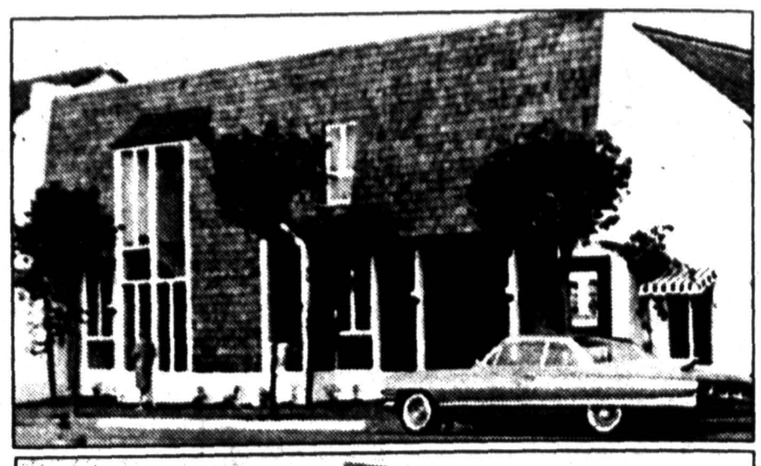

"We used all the best materials, including heavy slate on the gable roofs, clear-heart redwood trim that was specially aged, copper light fixtures, flashing and downspouts — the works," McMills says. He estimates construction costs at $150 per square foot.

On the ground floor there is room for four retail stores — all of which remain unleased, says John Breedlove of Lostrom and Company. He's hoping that unique shops will move in by spring.

There's a 1,000 square-foot office space behind the retail shops, which also hasn't been rented.

But the building's three apartments were all taken long before the building was finished.

One apartment, a majestic 3,000-square-foot penthouse with dramatic views of downtown Carmel and the Pacific Ocean beyond, so captured the imagination of a Carmel woman that she bought the entire building after seeing Mandurrago's plans.

The old Village Theater (pictured at top after it opened in 1967) has been transformed into a lovely retail/office/residential cottage. With the new French-style building are contractor Corey McMills (left), leasing agent John Breedlove, designer John Mandurrago and Carmel Mayor Ken White.

The woman — Jacqueline Clampett-Jones, mother of golfer Bobby Clampett — has moved in to the apartment.

"It's simply breathtaking, and it's right downtown" White said after getting a peak at the impressive Clampett-Jones home.

Two studio apartments, one with a quaint balcony right on Dolores Street, were also rented before the building was done.

"The planning commission was just great, and supported our concept from the very beginning," Mandurrago says. "Because it was a remodel, we were able to get more square footage than would normally be allowed. But I told the commission, with more square footage I can make the building look smaller," he recalls.

The commissioners were happy to get that "big ugly box" — the theater — replaced with a building more suitable for Carmel, Mandurrago says.

And the whole block will be a bit safer in an earthquake because of the new building, McMills says.

Fleur de Ville has a delicate name and a gracious façade but was designed to stand up to an earthquake — and to help the older buildings on both sides hold up, too.

"When the engineer calculated the loads he had to assumed that those buildings would 'bear' on this one," McMills says, "so we put in a metal skeleton with enough strength to support all three buildings in an earthquake."

"I'm really proud of this building, and I hope that in the years ahead Carmel will value it as much as the Tuck Box," Mandurrago says.

I may be the new kid on the block, but I've been around it a few times.

Commission pleased after first look at Cypress Inn expansion

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL Planning Commission had its first glance this week at a complex proposal that involves the historic designation of two buildings, the demolition of another, and a significant expansion of the landmark Cypress Inn.

Four separate properties are involved in the project: the Cypress Inn, the Morgan Studio and the Nielsen Building (all located on Lincoln Avenue) and the Holiday House on Camino Real.

Carmel law prohibits the expansion of motels in town, and also prohibits the elimination of residential spaces.

Carmel's famous Cypress Inn, which may get six more rooms and a brand-new restaurant

While careful to not make any promises to a group of local investors, the commissioners encouraged business partners Denny LeVett and Chris Tescher to pursue the project and return with specific plans for the commission to review.

"I want to say that I've never seen a plan come before this particular body that involves this much, and with the applicants trying to do the things that Carmel wants," said Commissioner Frank Wasko.

By shifting uses among the properties involved, the owners of the Cypress Inn — Doris Day, Terry Melcher and Denny LeVett — would be able to demolish the Morgan Building next door to the Inn and replace it with six additional hotel rooms and a 110 seat restaurant. The Cypress Inn would then be designated as an historic building.

The six new hotel rooms would be transferred to the Cypress Inn from the Holiday House on Camino Real. Tescher/LeVett, the company which owns the Holiday House, would then turn the Holiday House back into a single-family home, and request a historic designation for it.

The Morgan Studio currently has two retail spaces and five apartments. If all goes according to plan, four of those apartments would be transferred to the Nielsen Building — also owned by LeVett — when the Morgan Studio is demolished. The fifth residential use would be applied to Holiday House.

(The Morgan Building is currently listed as "significant" on Carmel's Historic

Cheers for Carmel Celebrates Community Committee

Dear Editor:

On Oct. 31 many Carmelites, their families and friends had the opportunity to enjoy a beautiful Halloween parade on Ocean Avenue followed by a delicious barbecue lunch and music in Devendorf Park. All of these activities were planned and coordinated by the Carmel Celebrates Community Committee (CCCC), with the proceeds going to the Mayor's Youth Fund. The event celebrates the City of Carmel-by-the-sea's birthday, with a Halloween parade and harvest (banquet) festival. Even the weather cooperated by providing warm, sunny skies throughout the entire event.

But the parade, barbecue and music are only the "tip of the iceberg" seen by those who attend. Underneath this tip are countless hours of time and effort the members of the CCCC and city workers spent to put on this event for all of Carmel, and its visitors, to enjoy. It is those volunteer members of CCCC and the city's staff that I wish to recognize and thank for this worthwhile undertaking.

What is the payoff for these volunteers? Merv Sutton, chairman of CCCC, put it best: "Our efforts are rewarded by the end results of raising money for the Mayor's Youth Fund and the satisfaction of seeing happy people at the event."

This year's event raised approximately Survey for its cultural heritage and association with an important person.)

Some of business spaces in the Nielsen Building would be eliminated to make room for the four new apartments.

While several commissioners liked the idea of preserving historic buildings and maintaining the current levels of housing space in Carmel, some people who spoke up at the meeting weren't happy about losing office space in town.

Ron Lebus, a dentist who has leased space in the Nielsen Building for the past 12 years, told the commission that it should consider the needs of residents who depend on local businesses.

"I'm the only dentist in the city limits," Lebus said. "I serve many seniors. Professional services such as mine should be included as an important part of this complex equation."

In an interview with The Pine Cone, Tescher said that there is plenty of vacant office space available in Carmel, while there is a shortage of apartments.

Other local business people at the meeting were worried about the impact of a new restaurant in town.

"As a small business owner in Carmel, a 110 seat restaurant would be detrimental to my growing business," said Kathryn Bryant, owner of Gem Restaurant.

Tescher asked the commission for guidance about the expansion of the Cypress Inn. In order to make the project work, Tescher said, the investors need to be able to increase the floor area ratio on the Morgan Site from 3,600 square feet to a little over 5,100 square feet.

"We're putting the cards on the table," Tescher said. "We need to know if we should go ahead with this project."

While commissioners had some concerns about parking and water issues, they approved "attempts to find solutions" for the project.
